the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million (1990-1999) and is projected to increase by a further 1.5 million by 2010 (Office for National Statistics 2000). The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase by 2.5 million by 2020 (Office for National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to develop strategies to meet the needs of the ageing population. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for the ageing population, which sets out the government's commitment to improve the health and well-being of older people. The strategy is based on the following principles:

- To improve the health and well-being of older people.
- To ensure that older people have access to the services and resources they need.
- To ensure that older people are able to live independently and actively.
- To ensure that older people are able to participate in the life of their communities.

The strategy is based on the following principles: to improve the health and well-being of older people; to ensure that older people have access to the services and resources they need; to ensure that older people are able to live independently and actively; and to ensure that older people are able to participate in the life of their communities.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 12.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased from 4.5 million to 6.5 million (Office for National Statistics 2000). The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase to 15.5 million by 2020, and the number of people aged 75 and over to 8.5 million (Office for National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people in the UK. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for older people, which sets out the government's commitment to improve the lives of older people. The strategy is based on the following principles:

- Older people should be able to live independently and actively.
- Older people should be able to access the services and support they need.
- Older people should be able to participate in the decisions that affect their lives.
- Older people should be able to live in a safe and secure environment.

The strategy also sets out a number of key objectives, including:

- To improve the health and well-being of older people.
- To improve the quality of life of older people.
- To improve the financial security of older people.
- To improve the housing of older people.
- To improve the transport of older people.
- To improve the social inclusion of older people.

The strategy is a key document for the UK government, and it sets out the government's commitment to improve the lives of older people. It is a document that is of great importance to older people, and it is a document that is of great importance to the UK government.
