Re: HEM-2025-0682.R1, entitled "Rps19 R67Δ mutation creates a model of Diamond-Blackfan anaemia and reveals downstream mediators of p53 pathway."

Dear Dr [REDACTED],

I am pleased to inform you that your manuscript has now been accepted for publication in HemaSphere, the official journal of the European Hematology Association (EHA); congratulations.

There is one remaining comments of the reviewer(s) that you can possible consider to change (figure) at the proof stage - these comments are included at the bottom of this letter.

What happens now?

Your files will be checked to ensure that everything is ready for publication. The Editorial Office may need to contact you if final versions of files are required.

You will also have the opportunity to review a galley proof of your near-final publication. Further correspondence from our production (layout) team is forthcoming.

Ahead, you will be asked to provide the appropriate signed license agreement for Wiley to publish the final version of your article, and to pay--if applicable--any related Article Processing Charges (APCs).

To do so, you (or the corresponding author, if different) will receive an email from Wiley's Author Services Team asking you to log in and complete either one or both steps. Kindly note that before we can publish your article, a license must be confirmed and any applicable APC payment must be completed.

Along with HemaSphere's open access status and PMC index, we will further increase attention to your work by including it in social media campaigns and newsletters.

If your manuscript contains SUPPORTING INFORMATION:

- Wiley will host an approved version of your supporting information with the article online.

- Supporting information will not be copyedited, checked, or changed from its original format. If you notice an error, please contact our Editorial Office immediately. Supporting information materials must be original; if previously published, please provide the necessary permissions. You may also display your supporting information on your own or institutional website. These are not subject to the journal's embargo date included in the copyright agreement. The responsibility for scientific accuracy and file functionality remains entirely with you as the author. We display a disclaimer explaining this with any published supporting information.

Thank you for your fine contribution. On behalf of the Editors of HemaSphere, we look forward to your continued contributions to our journal.

Sincerely,

[REDACTED]
